Introduction

This project grew out of work done for the “Publishers’ Bindings Online 1815-1930: the Art of Books” website (<http://bindings.lib.ua.edu>; produced in conjunction with the University of Alabama). We were identifying the work of Scandinavian-American publishers as a separate category for the website, and soon realized that the University of Wisconsin Madison libraries had a large amount of material from Scandinavian-American publishers which was not specifically recognized anywhere. We thought a guide to that material might be helpful to researchers, and so we began work on a list of our Scandinavian-American publisher holdings 1840-1920.

The list we present now is probably not complete, but we hope it is a fair representation of our collections. The majority of the works listed are located in Memorial Library or the Wisconsin Historical Society, but some are located in other Madison campus collections. No distinction has been made between print and microfilm holdings. We have also included the names of publishers encountered in our research for whom we have no holdings; this is by no means a complete list of Scandinavian-American publishers active between 1840 and 1920, but a representation of what we found during the course of our research.

The publishers are organized alphabetically according to nationality – Danish, Norwegian, and Swedish. Where no nationality could be clearly determined, the category “Scandinavian” was used. In addition, the “Other Publishers” category lists those who may not have had Scandinavian origins, but who did publish works by, about, or for Scandinavian-Americans. As Danish and Norwegian share a written language, their publications often address a common readership, and deciding whether a publisher was Danish or Norwegian was sometimes difficult. We used our best judgment in these cases.

Each entry gives the publisher’s name and location(s), alternate forms of the name, some brief historical information about the publisher where possible, and a chronological list of UW Madison holdings for that publisher. Where the publisher’s name is a personal name (i.e. John Anderson), the entry for that publisher will be found under the surname (i.e. Anderson). Corporate names (i.e. Anderson Printing Co.) will be found under the first word in the name (again, Anderson).

We would like to extend our thanks to Susanne Nevin, Special Collections Cataloging Librarian at St. Olaf College, for her help and advice in getting us started, and particularly for the use of her list of Norwegian-American publishers.

We hope you will find this guide helpful and informative.

Hans Borchsenius

Madison, Wis.

(see also: Skandinaviske Demokratiske Presseforening)

Born in 1832 in Denmark, Borchsenius immigrated to America in 1856 and spent a short time in New York City before moving to Madison. He learned to be a printer at the Norwegian newspaper Norsk Amerikaner and purchased the paper in 1858, renaming it Nordstjernen. The paper was published by the Skandinaviske Demokratiske Presseforening until 1860, when it was absorbed by Emigranten. Borchsenius died in 1908.

Christian Rasmussen (1852-1926), emigrated to America in 1873 and opened a small bookstore in Chicago in 1874. He soon began publishing books, newspapers and magazines, and moved to Minneapolis in 1887, possibly to get out from the shadow of John Anderson. He built up a string of Republican papers in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Illinois. At the peak of his press operation, he ran 4 weekly papers (with a total circulation of 22,500), 3 magazines, an ad agency and published Norwegian as well as Danish books. His Minneapolis shop was called "the newspaper factory," though circulation of his publications was modest and he found it hard to keep them all going. His papers included Ugebladet (1881-1959), Racine Posten (acquired 1905; originated as Folkets Avis, founded 1876), Chicago Posten (1881), and St. Paul Posten (1902; originated as Heimdal). The group was merged in 1915 and continued as Ugebladet.

Anderson was a printer by trade, and in the 1860s he began to print books as well as job printing. In 1866 he founded Skandinaven, a weekly or semi-weekly newspaper with Iver Lawson and Knud Langeland. Langeland and Lawson broke with Anderson in 1872 and established a rival paper, Amerika, with the support of John A. Johnson of Madison. Skandinaven became one of the most influential and successful newspapers in the Scandinavian immigrant community, and merged briefly with Amerika in 1873 to form Skandinaven og Amerika. Through the success of the paper, Anderson was able to build a publishing business that became the largest venture of its kind.

Augsburg Publishing House

(Minneapolis, Minn.)

(appears as Augsburg Publishing House, Augsburg Pub. House, Augsburg Pub. House trykkeri, Augsburg Pub. Co., Augsburg)

Augsburg Publishing House was one of the largest Norwegian-American publishers, founded in Minneapolis in 1891. Its publishing focus was more on religious than national material, and so Lutheran titles, whether Norwegian, Swedish or Danish are predominant in their publications. The company is still in existence today as "Augsburg Fortress, Publishers", following a 1988 merger.

Inmansville, Wis.; Madison, Wis.

(see also: Faedrelandet og Emigrantens Officin)
(appears as Emigrantens Officin, and Emigranten Office, sometimes with “Emigranten(s)” in quotes)

The Emigranten newspaper began publication in 1851 in Inmansville, Wisconsin, where it faced many challenges in trying to run a press under “pioneer conditions,” namely bitter cold and not enough type. The editor was appointed by the Board of Directors of the Scandinavian Press Association which also selected books to be printed on the paper’s press. However, there were conflicts between the secular newspaper and Synod publishing, and when the paper moved to Madison in 1857 it also moved to private ownership. From 1857 until the paper merged with Faedrelandet in 1868 to become Faedrelandet og Emigranten, the editor was C.F. Solberg. Under his leadership fiction began to appear with greater frequency, and the paper played an important role in the development of Norwegian literature.

Waldemar Kriedt Publishing Company

Minneapolis, Minn.

(appears as W. Kriedt Pub. Co., Waldm. Kriedt, W. Kriedt)

Kriedt was born in Denmark, and had a brother or cousin there, Sophus Kriedt, with whom he collaborated on publishing ventures. He was known as a disreputable character; when he arrived in Minneapolis in 1883 he started business as a saloonkeeper before opening a printing shop and saloon on Washington Ave. in 1885. Two years later he moved next door to Budstikken. Throughout his career he specialized in cheap, popular literature, and was the American publisher of the Norwegian immigrant Lars Andreas Stenholt.

1908 - Stenholt, L. A. Paven i Madison, eller, Rasmus Kvelvers maerkvaerdige liv og haendelser.

Knud Langeland

Racine, Wis.

(see also: Amerika Publishing Company, John Anderson Publishing Co.)
(appears as K. Langland & Co., Langland & Hatlestad, K. Langeland, Langeland & Anderson, Langeland, Johnson & Co.)

Langeland is most famous as a co-founder of both the Skandinaven and Amerika papers, but his first publishing venture was as the editor of Nordlyset and Democraten. Nordlyset was the first Norwegian weekly newspaper, set up in Even Heg's log cabin in 1847. Langeland took over in 1849, and the paper became the Democraten in 1850 before finally failing in 1851. An attempted publishing project of a popular book of homilies in September 1847 also failed because the paper did not have enough type for such a large undertaking and could not get enough subscriptions. It seems it was too early for a newspaper to succeed with the immigrant community – the first Norwegian settlers in Wisconsin had only arrived in 1838, and were still busy clearing the land and establishing homesteads. The total circulation for both Nordlyset and Democraten was just 280 subscribers.

UW Madison Holdings:

1847 - Nordlyset.

1847-1850.

1850 - Democraten.

Library has 1850-1851.

Rock Island, Ill.
(see also: Augustana Tract Society; Lutheran Augustana Book Concern)
(appears as Augustana Book Concern, Augustana Book Concerns tryckeri och bokbinderi, Augustana Book Concerns Boktryckeri, Augustana Book Concerns Tryckeri)

The Augustana Book Concern was the Swedish counterpart to the Augsburg Publishing House in Lutheran publishing. It was formed in 1884 in Rock Island, Illinois, after a series of small publishing ventures and reorganizations within the Augustana Synod. Its immediate predecessor in these reorganizations was the Augustana Tract Society. The Book Concern did not have the sanction of the Synod, and with other publishing ventures in operation as well, there was a great deal of confusion. In 1889 the Augustana Synod established a Board of Publication which took over the affairs of the Book Concern and formed a new corporation, the Lutheran Augustana Book Concern. Publications with the imprint of Augustana Book Concern continue to appear after this date, however, and it is said to have printed close to four million copies of books in Swedish between 1890 and 1935, making it the largest Swedish-American publishing house.

(see also: Augustana Book Concern; Thulin and Anderson; Ungdomens Vänner)

The Augustana Tract Society was part of a series of reorganizations of the publishing ventures of the Augustana Synod of the Lutheran Church. It was formed out of the Ungdomens Vänner society at Augustana College, and secured interest in the printing plant of Thulin and Anderson, Moline, Illinois. In 1884 it was superceded in another reorganization by the Augustana Book Concern.
